The parties' request comes after recently receiving a victim restitution request from five of the victims allegedly depicted in the images and videos charged in this case. According to the parties, in the request, victims' counsel asserts losses in the amount of $5,075,835.00 and requests "restitution for either the full amount of economic and rehabilitation costs, or as the court deems fair and just."

After having conferred on the restitution request, the parties jointly requested additional time to investigate the restitution claim and to conduct additional research regarding the application of Paroline v. United States, 134 S.Ct. 1710 (2014) (holding that restitution in child pornography cases is limited to
